

JEFF MELVIN

June 2008

Jeff Melvin joins the team at Building Science Corporation seeking to provide exceptional customer care for the professional students of science who have wisely turned to Building Science Press and Building Science Seminars for the best design and building practices.

Jeff brings a wide range of experience with him to the Building Science Companies. He has worked in the residential construction and remodeling industry, print media, radio advertising, retail, and food service. His experience has led him to understand consumer relationships, making him an excellent representative for our media services.

Jeff enrolled in the BAC last year to develop a life-long interest in design and building. He believes that his appreciation for historic buildings -particularly in his hometown of Lawrence, Massachusetts, and his deep interest in truly sustainable architecture complement each other on the platform of building science.

He is a voracious reader and learner who has absorbed details of a variety of construction trades by volunteering his time on various projects all over New England. He enjoys the outdoors, classical music, spending time with his wife and is currently working on ending a seven-year championship drought in both his fantasy baseball and fantasy football leagues. (Editor's note: Jeff only wishes. He has never won his fantasy football league.)

Education

Boston Architectural College
Boston, Massachusetts
Candidate for Bachelor of Architecture

Professional Registrations and Memberships

Boston Society of Architects
Lawrence History Center
The Green Roundtable

For more information go to our website at buildingscienceconsulting.com